CT-334

Addie E. Brady House
2165 Chaneyville Road
Owings, Calvert County
Circa 1900
Private

The historic dwelling and the associated outbuildings, barns, and agricultural fields at 2165 Chaneyville Road are significant as an intact farmstead representative of the agricultural lifestyle of Calvert County residents in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The dwelling, dating to circa 1900, is typical of farmhouses constructed in Calvert County at the turn of the 20th century in its two-and-a-half-story, cross gable form with a one-story, full-width front porch. Together with the extant domestic outbuildings, the property provides an excellent example of the rural lifestyle during the period. The associated agricultural buildings on the site, including a corn crib and several tobacco barns, are exemplary of agricultural practices during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Together these buildings and the associated fields represent an intact agricultural landscape in Calvert County.

The two-and-a-half-story, wood-frame dwelling is clad in asbestos shingles and has a relatively deep cross-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The house has a rectangular footprint with no ell. The five-bay façade is defined by the prominent central gable which has a 1/1 window and sawn bargeboard in the tympanum, and a one-story, five-bay full-width porch. The porch rests on brick piers and has a half-hip roof sheathed in asphalt shingles and chamfered wood posts. It exhibits decorative sawn wood brackets, turned balusters, and a spindlework frieze. Windows are 1/1 with unmolded and unmitered wood surrounds and sills that are flush with the wall on the façade, and vinyl surrounds on the rear, or northwest elevation. The dwelling has projecting eaves and open gables, and a vinyl box cornice and soffit. The house was once the primary residence for the surrounding farm and has an impressive intact collection of associated domestic and agricultural outbuildings and barns dating to the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Located amidst agricultural fields, the house at 2165 Chaneyville Road, dating to circa 1900, is in the vicinity of the small rural community of Chaneyville, Calvert County, Maryland. The building is a two-and-half-story, wood-frame dwelling exhibiting the typical characteristics of a turn-of-the-century farmhouse in Calvert County, including a cross-gable roof and a one-story, full-width front porch. The house was once the primary residence for the surrounding farm and has an impressive intact collection of associated domestic and agricultural outbuildings and barns.

SETTING. The historic house is located on a small 1.26-acre parcel of land at the end of a long dirt and gravel drive perpendicular to Chaneyville Road. In front of the house, the drive turns southwest 90 degrees and leads past two large tobacco barns. Another dirt road breaks off of this main drive and runs along the southwest side of the house back towards additional agricultural buildings. The house is surrounded on all sides by open cultivated fields which are part of a larger tract that occupies the land in the northwest quadrant of the intersection of Chaneyville Road and Southern Maryland Boulevard. The land is fairly level with small rises and a gradual slope northeast to Southern Maryland Boulevard. The house is situated on one of these small rises. Mature trees and shrubs are clustered around the house but do not obscure the façade of the house which faces southeast onto Chaneyville Road.

PRIMARY RESOURCE. The two-and-a-half-story, wood-frame dwelling is clad in asbestos shingles and has a relatively deep cross-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The building originally rested on a brick pier foundation. The brick piers are still visible, but the spaces between them have been filled in with concrete. The house has a rectangular footprint with no ell. Windows are 1/1 with unmolded and unmitered wood surrounds and sills that are flush with the wall on the façade, and vinyl surrounds on the rear, or northwest elevation. The dwelling has projecting eaves and open gables, and a vinyl box cornice and soffit. Two original, interior, brick chimneys with corbeled caps are present on the house, as well as an exterior-end, shouldered, brick chimney with a corbeled cap located on the northeast elevation that appears to be more recent.

The five-bay façade is defined by the prominent central gable which has a 1/1 window and sawn bargeboard in the tympanum, and a one-story, five-bay full-width porch. The porch rests on brick piers and has a half-hip roof sheathed in asphalt shingles and supported by chamfered wood posts. It exhibits decorative sawn wood brackets, turned balusters, and a spindlework frieze. These decorative elements, along with the sawn bargeboard in the central gable, may be later additions to the porch, which was at one time enclosed. (1) Other elements present on the façade are clearly of recent origin, including the porch ceiling, the applied wood consoles on the first-story window surrounds, and wood molding where the porch ceiling meets the wall of the house. The primary entry to the house is contained within the central bay of the façade and features a three-light transom and two-light sidelights over flat panels. Another entry is located on the northeast elevation and is sheltered by a one-story portico on square, wood posts.

Physical and documentary evidence give some suggestion that the house may have been significantly altered since its construction. The double-pile form of the house is unusual for the region, and the presence of different window surrounds on the rear elevation than the façade, along with the unusually shallow pitch of the roof may indicate that the house was originally single-pile and that it has since been enlarged and a new roof put on. Furthermore, a prior survey conducted circa 1980 indicated that at that time the house had a rear ell. (2) This ell is no longer present, and there is no evidence of it visible from the exterior of the house.

SECONDARY RESOURCES. In the immediate vicinity of the dwelling are a number of domestic and agricultural outbuildings. To the north of the house are three one-story sheds. One of these sheds, dating to circa 1980, is a wood-frame building clad in vertical plywood with a side-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. East of this modern shed are two historic one-story wood-frame sheds. The older of the two, dating to circa 1900 or before, features vertical flush wood boards, a wood cornice, flush gable ends, and projecting eaves featuring exposed sawn rafters. The building has a front-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles, and a hinged door in the southwest elevation. The newer of the two sheds, dating to circa 1940, is also clad in vertical flush wood boards. The shed, which rests on a concrete pier foundation, has projecting gable ends with a wood box cornice and short cornice gable returns, and a front-gable roof sheathed in corrugated metal sheets. A short distance west of these sheds is another small one-story, wood-frame outbuilding which appears to be a privy dating to the first half of the 20th century. It is clad in asphalt shingles and has a front-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles.

Located to the west of the house are two small one-story wood-frame sheds dating to circa 1900. Both sheds are clad in vertical, flush, wood boards and have shed roofs sheathed in v-crimp metal sheets. These outbuildings may have served as chicken houses at one time. North of the small sheds is a one-story, wood-frame corn crib dating to circa 1900 or earlier. It is clad in vertical flush wood boards and has a front-gable roof sheathed in asphalt shingles. The corn crib is in an advanced state of deterioration. Southwest of the corn crib is a one-story, wood-frame barn dating to circa 1940. It has concrete-block piers, is clad in vertical, flush, wood boards, and has a gable roof sheathed in v-crimp metal sheets. The barn is long and has several large door openings in the southeast elevation suggesting that it was used as a tractor barn. North of these buildings is a one-story, wood-frame barn with an open shed-roof extension on the southwest elevation. It is clad in vertical flush wood boards and has a gable roof sheathed in corrugated metal sheets. The barn, which appears to date to the late 19th century or earlier, is badly deteriorated.

Five large, wood-frame tobacco barns are present on the site. The oldest appears to be the gable-roof barn directly northwest of the domestic complex. This building, clad in vertical, flush, wood boards with a gable roof sheathed in corrugated metal, features shed additions on three sides, a feature typical of 19th-century tobacco barns. In the field northeast of the house is a large gable-roof tobacco barn with an asymmetrical catslide gable-end roofline suggesting that sheds were added to the southeast and northeast elevations. This barn, which may date to the 19th century, has concrete-block pier foundations and is clad in vertical, flush, wood boards with metal sheeting on the roof. Southwest of the house are two largest tobacco barns on the site. The one closest to the house, appearing to date to circa 1900, is a long gable-roof barn clad in vertical, flush, wood boards. A full-length, shed-roof extension is present on the southeast elevation, as well as two smaller concrete-block, shed-roof additions to the northeast elevation. Beyond this barn is a long 20th-century gambrel-roof barn clad in vertical, flush, wood boards and with metal sheets on the roof. The last barn on the site is located in the north quadrant of the intersection of Chaneyville Road and the private drive that leads to the house. This medium-sized gable-roof barn, dating to circa 1920, is distinguished by painted murals depicting rural agricultural scenes on the southwest and southeast elevations.

The historic dwelling and the associated outbuildings, barns, and agricultural fields at 2165 Chaneyville Road are significant as an intact farmstead representative of the agricultural lifestyle of Calvert County residents in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The dwelling, dating to circa 1900, is typical of farmhouses constructed in Calvert County at the turn of the 20th century in its two-and-a-half-story, cross gable form with a one-story, full-width front porch. Together with the extant domestic outbuildings, the property provides an excellent example of the rural lifestyle during the period. The associated agricultural buildings on the site, including a corn crib and several tobacco barns, are exemplary of agricultural practices during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Throughout most of its history until the second half of the 20th century, Calvert County was a highly rural, agricultural county engaged primarily in tobacco cultivation and characterized by an isolated, highly dispersed population. At the time of the 1890 federal census, Calvert County was the smallest county in the state of Maryland both in land area and population, but fifth in annual tobacco production behind a number of significantly larger, wealthier and more populous counties. Just ten years later in 1900, Calvert County had more than doubled its tobacco production and had risen to the third largest tobacco producing county in the state behind nearby Charles and Prince George's Counties.

Accordingly, there was a county-wide increase in the construction of tobacco barns and associated domestic farmhouses during this period. Dwellings built during this period were largely two-story, wood-frame buildings three or five bays in width, with a center hall or side hall plan. Most had side-gable roof, or a cross-gable roof with a central front gable, a one-story full-width or wrap-around front porch with turned posts, and a two-story rear ell. Stylistically, they featured such late-Victorian-era or Queen Anne stylistic elements as lancet or round-arched windows, fishscale shingles in the gable ends, and sawn brackets. These elements are particularly common in houses built during the late 19th century. By the first decade of the 20th century, houses exhibit less of these flamboyant decorative elements and favor a more simplified architectural expression. Interiors were heated by wood-burning stoves vented through narrow, square, brick chimneys.

During this period there were over 1,000 farms in Calvert County primarily engaged in tobacco cultivation, with an average size of approximately 125 acres. The farmstead at 2165 Chaneyville Road was one such property, with the historic dwelling serving as the architectural and domestic focal point. Constructed circa 1900, the house adopts the standard farmhouse form of a two-story, wood-frame dwelling with a cross-gable roof and full-width front porch. The dwelling, sheds, and privy reflect the domestic functions of the farmstead, and the corncrib, tobacco barns and cultivated fields represent the agricultural aspect of a working farm. Together, the surrounding 105.79-acre-surrounding parcel and associated buildings are exemplary of a Calvert County tobacco farmstead of the period.

The historic house is located at 2165 Chaneyville Road in Owings, Calvert County, Maryland. It has been associated with Tax Map 6, Parcel 423 since its construction in the late 19th century. For the purposes of the survey, the immediate 1.26-acre parcel on which the house sits was surveyed, in addition to the adjacent 1-acre parcel to the west and the surrounding 105.79-acre parcel. These three parcels were historically associated as one farm and are all still owned by members of the Brady family. The current deed to the property is found in the land records of Calvert County in the Calvert County Courthouse in Prince Frederick: Deed Book KPS 1312, Folio 622.
